Boundaries of Socialist Medicine workshop program

Thursday, 1 June 2017
Upper Lounge, Reed Hall, University of Exeter

9:00-9:30 Registration and Refreshments  9:30-11:00 Global socialism and health

James Mark (University of Exeter): Socialism Goes Global

Tobias Rupprecht (University of Exeter): Building a healthy economy in the socialist world

Ljubica Spaskovska (University of Exeter): Revolution and health: the Yugoslav Red Cross and the Algerian Revolution

Artemy Kalinovsky (University of Amsterdam): Socialist medicine in Central Asia in the late Cold War

11:00-11:30 Coffee break

11:30-13:00 Global health and socialism

Monika Baar (University of Leiden): Socialist Development and Primary Health Care

Rebecca Williams (University of Exeter): Planning for health in postcolonial India

Anne-Marie Moulin (CNRS): The Alma Ata Heritage. Vaccination, Socialism and Democracy

Jessica Reinisch (Birkbeck, University of London): UNRRA in early postwar Poland: an agent of socialism?

13:00-14:00 Lunch

14:00-15:30 View from within: Meanings of health in socialism

Johanna Conterio (Flinders University): Environment and Health in the Soviet Health Resort under Stalin

Corina Dobos (New Europe College, Bucharest): Socialist Europe as laboratory: postwar pronatalist research and policies

Robert Balogh (Institute of History, Hungarian Academy of Sciences): Health and body of the industrial worker in state socialist Hungary: late modernity and/or post-1956

Dan Healey (Oxford University): The 'purest form of socialism': socialised medicine and Soviet power
Boundaries of Socialist Medicine workshop program - Socialist Medicine

15:30-16:00 Coffee Break

16:00-17:30 View from without: Meanings of socialist health
Anais Van Ervelde (University of Leiden): The transnational travels of a Polish model of disability rehabilitation 1960s-1980s
Jeremy Greene (Johns Hopkins University): The Spectre of Socialized Medicine
David Brydan (Birkbeck, University of London): Socialist Health and Franco's “Social State"
John Stewart (Glasgow Caledonian University): 'They Have it in Russia and They Have It in Sweden': Socialized Health Care Systems and British Socialist Doctors, 1930-1951

19:00 Drinks reception

20:30 Dinner

Friday, 2 June 2017
Conference Room 2, Innovation Centre, University of Exeter

9:30-10:00 Refreshments

10:00-11:30 Psychiatry and socialism
Mat Savelli (McMaster University): Thinking beyond ideological platitudes: socialism and mental healthcare in Yugoslavia
Sarah Marks (Birkbeck, University of London): Suggestion, Persuasion and Work? Psychotherapies in the Soviet Sphere
Ana Antic (University of Exeter): Non-Aligned Psychiatry?
Aleksandra Brokman (University of East Anglia): Hypnosis and Surgery Metaphors: Searching for Soviet Psychotherapy

11:30-12:00 Coffee break

12:00-13:30 Public health and socialism
Johanna Folland (University of Michigan): Late-Socialist Public Health and the AIDS Crisis in East Germany
Mary Brazelton (University of Cambridge): Patriotic hygiene’ and the making of modern citizens in the People's Republic of China, 1949-78
Mateusz Zatorski (London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine): Of spies, Jews, and religious sects: the establishment of socialist Poland’s anti-tobacco movement
Tricia Starks (University of Arkansas): "Russian Anti-Tobacco Campaigns in Global Perspective"

13:30-14:30 Lunch

14:30-16:00 Socialist international health
Dora Vargha (University of Exeter): "There and back again: Hungary and socialist international health in the 1950s"

Anne-Emanuelle Birn (University of Toronto): "Alternative fact-nding: Latin American health reformers in search of a Soviet welfare state utopia"

Sean Brotherton (University of Chicago): "The Socialist Humanitarian Imperative: The Logic and Practice of Cuba's Quest for Global Health in the Americas"

16:00 Concluding remarks